Novelty (N)	Claims	2-7, 10, 12, 14-41, 45, 47-50	YES
	Claims	1, 8-9, 11, 13, 42-44, 46, 51-55	NO
Inventive step (IS)	Claims	2-5, 17-21, 23, 24	YES
	Claims	6-7, 10, 12, 14-16, 22, 25-41, 45, 47-50	NO

	Claims		NO

2. Citations and explanations (Rule 70.7)

Documents cited in the International Search Report:

D1 WO 9959042 A1 (Friendly Machines Ltd), 18 November 1999
D2 WO 9938056 A1 (AB Electrolux), 29 July 1999
D3 US 5940346 A (J.S.Sadowsky et al), 17 August 1999
D4 US 4470013 A (G.Posseme), 4 Sept 1984

The most relevant documents are D1 and D2. Documents D3 and D4 represent the state of the art.

Document D1 discloses a system comprising an autonomous robot for systematically moving about an area to be covered. Operating of the robot is arranged with the help of boundary and obstacle markers (48,50) formed of wires and connected to a power supply via a wave generator (62). A magnetic sensor (72) for sensing the magnetic field of the markers is arranged on the robot (70). In one of embodiments the signals for the markers are formed by pulses (64,66,68), with a short synchronization pulse (64) as introduction of every period. (See page 9, line 6-page 10, line 14; fig.3A,3B,3C). The robot can be used for household appliances, such as vacuum cleaner and lawnmower.

Document D2 discloses an electronic search system for a working tool, such as lawnmower or vacuum cleaner. A border cable is placed so that it separates an inner area from an outer area and one or more search cables are placed within the inner area. A signal generator feeds the border cable with current containing at least two alternating-current components of different frequency, whose magnetic field affects a sensing unit located on the tool, while the search cables are fed by virtually identical current, but where the current direction alternates in time in being either in or out of phase in relation to the current direction in the border cable. Thereby magnetic fields in the different areas will create different time patterns and a control unit of the tool can separate different areas. (See page 15, line 1-19; fig. 6, 7).

According to what is known from document D1, the invention defined in claims 1 and 42 is not considered to be novel. Even claims 8-9, 11, 13, 43-44, 46 and 51-55 lacks novelty in the view of document D1.

What is defined in characterizing part of claims 25-33 is disclosed in document D2, why these claims are not considered to involve an inventive step.

Claims 6-7, 10, 12, 14-16, 22, 34-41, 45 and 47-50 only contain features which are not considered to go beyond what can be expected from a person skilled in the art, especially since the advantages thus achieved can be readily contemplated in advance. Therefore the subject matter of these claims is not considered to involve an inventive step.

None of the cited documents, taken alone or in combination, reveals the invention defined in claims 2-5, 17-21, 23 and 24. Therefore, the invention claimed in these claims is novel and involves an inventive step.

The invention is considered to be industrially applicable.

Box No. VII Certain defects in the international application

The following defects in the form or contents of the international application have been noted:

Claim 51 concerns the method, but contains the features that characterize the system and also refers to all preceding claims, concerning both the method and the system.
Claim 51 should concern the system and refer to claims 42-50.
